[00:02:44-00:03:38] So can you go ahead and just restate your major and why you chose it at first and then why you were choosing to switch to another major? I'm really big into like architecture of all sorts. Like art wise or building wise. The reason I'm in architecture now, but the reason why I'm to switch out is because I'm more focused on like the site. The site of a construction. I'm more interested in the construction site rather than the design process version of it. Like of buildings, like learning with the building codes and materials. I'm very into that rather than just doing the design process. So I think becoming a project manager gives me a glimpse of both in a way.

[00:05:17-00:06:02] Was your toughest? My toughest moment would be all the long nights I've spent in my architecture studio, designing and making buildings that will take up a lot of my time. Mm-hmm. That's been very tough for me because sometimes you go like days, not days, like skipping like two meals or something. So pretty tiring. And that's like a four-hour class course. And it does take up a lot of your free time. And sometimes it's hard to balance all the other classes or the other like home university course requirements rather than just the course I was just specifically for my major.
